

SVM are supervised learning models used for classification and regression.

The find hyperplane that best separates classes, maximizing margin between them.

SVM can handle linear and non-linear data using kernels such as linear, polynomial and RBF. They perform well in high dimensional spaces and are effective for complex dataset.